RE: Jessie Roberts

Dear Kim:

I have reviewed the deed to Jessie Roberts recorded in Book 1620, Page 2404. You asked about the last sentence of the legal description. The title search did not reveal that a declaration of intent had ever been recorded for this home, and therefore the Roberts would not have been able to get a loan on the property, as the home would not have been converted to real property. The clause in the deed was an attempt by the drafter of the deed to convert this home from personal property to real property so that Mr. Roberts would be able to obtain a loan. Any home, even a site built home, can be removed from property, but for a manufactured home, a declaration of intent is necessary to convert the home to real property in order to protect the lender, and perfect its lien on the property. If there is no lien or mortgage on the property, then this protection is not necessary, as there is not a lender involved. In this case, Mr. Roberts does not have a mortgage on his property, so there is no reason that the home cannot be removed.

I hope this helps, and let me know if you need anything else.

Very Truly Yours,

Mark E. Randolph
